2. COMPANY INFORMATION

2.1 Background

Secret Recipe is a famous Malaysian-based cafe brand specializing in cakes, pastries, fusion cuisines, and beverages. In 1997, Datuk Steven Sim and his wife, Mrs. Tracy, located the first cafe in central Kuala Lumpur, and it was a small display called Secret Recipe. The founder's Vision was to create a warm and welcoming room where patrons could enjoy eating desserts to the fullest and have a good meal. Secret Recipe operated as an independent eatery with a solitary location. The founder utilized it as a pilot program to gauge Malaysians' reception of the restaurant, which specializes in cakes featuring an assortment of unique flavors. Following the successful pilot test, the founder initiated the franchising process with a friend in the year 2000. Following the franchisor's determination that the franchise model was viable; the business option was made available to prospective franchisees in 2001. Additionally, the business has expanded to neighboring nations such as Singapore, Indonesia, Thailand, China, Brunei, Cambodia, Myanmar, Maldives, and Bangladesh with more than 440 outlets.

Motivated by a passion for refined products, Secret Recipe gradually became the first choice for many customers, who greatly appreciated its never-changing quality, as well as those who occasionally enjoyed its innovative, often award-winning offerings. Over time, the company has experienced growth in the market not only domestically but internationally – now having a powerful presence in the so-called sectors operating within Asia, Australia, and the Middle East. Secret Recipe hopes to engage with individuals, families and deliver out customers with higher income level by selling high quality and innovative products at moderate price, developing a leading and comfortable location, and giving clients superb customer service. This goes in line with Secret Recipe's operation principle of serving quality for the happiness of its dear customers.

2.2 Organizational Structure

followed by a CEO. Below the CEO, there are six main departments which are Marketing, Product, Finance, Operations, Human Resources, Training, and Information Technology.

Marketing is divided into Trade Marketing, Advertising/Promotion, Store Hand, and Document Controller. Product includes Purchasing Executive, Culinary Manager (which likely refers to recipe development), and Staff. Finance consists of Accountant and Auditor. Operations includes Store Manager, Supervisor, and there is staff which consist of Cashier, Floor/Service, Barista, and Kitchen Staff. Each outlet manager is responsible for reporting to their supervisor based on the chart's operations. Outlet managers oversee subordinates, while supervisors help managers. All three Human Resources, Training and Information Technology include the Manager and Staff. This structure suggests that Secret Recipe is a functionally departmentalized organization. This type of structure groups similar functions together, which can improve efficiency and expertise in those areas. For example, Secret Recipe has a restricted range of control. Secret Recipe employees simply need to disclose their obligations to their superiors. Typically, cashiers, floor staff, baristas, and kitchen staff report to their outlet supervisor. Their supervisor will then report to and receive orders from the outlet manager.

Furthermore, an Enterprise Resource Planning system is created and used, with inventory maintained in real-time and resources allocated more wisely. Training is provided to both franchisees and newly hired employees who will begin serving at every new shop. Secret Recipe has several locations, each requiring continuous and accurate inventory control. With an ERP system in place, inventories can be tracked in real time at all locations. This provides better visibility into stock levels, ingredient usage, and replenishment requirements. With current inventory data, Secret Recipe can optimize stock levels, prevent waste, and ensure ingredients are always accessible to match consumer demand. The system has resulted in a 10% increase in sales, and the staff got more efficient by 5%. was promoted quite early by winning the Best Cheesecake Award in the Kuala Lumpur Cakes Competition 1998. Whether the business recreates its versions or tries new products, fans have rejoiced in its cakes and transformed them into a global phenomenon with over 500 stores worldwide. The core of the business strategy of Secret Recipe is diversification. Where cakes were the brand's staple, it now boasts a wider variety of food, drinks, and sweets. Its geographical reach (footprint) covers countries like Singapore, Indonesia, Thailand, Brunei, Maldives, the USA, Australia, Vietnam, and Bangladesh. Secret Recipe's business strategy is centered on innovation, quality, location, and promotion. Therefore, the company seeks to provide high-quality meals and desserts at reasonable prices and to continually exceed consumer expectations.

With the help of such targeted advertisements, engaging content, and interactive experiences, Secret Recipe amplifies its online presence, communicates with many individuals for the first time, and, as a result, stimulates brand loyalty. Moreover, the coffee franchise has offline marketing initiatives, including in-store promotions, influencer collaborations, and event participation to deliver the brand message personally and remind customers of the brand positioning. The Secret Recipe stands out while promoting its tasty recipes, including homemade cakes baked with care and skill. The brand uses marketing techniques full of temptations, ultimately drawing consumers irresistibly. Hence, it captivates the customer, whether the customers are loyal fans or newcomers. engagement. One key difficulty is the challenge of maintaining user interest and participation over time. Despite efforts to gain and keep users, the app faces poor engagement rates and underutilized services and capabilities. Furthermore, the app's lack of personalization and customization choices contributes to a general user experience that falls short of meeting individual requirements and expectations. Customers looking for more full capabilities may find the app uninteresting, as it only offers basic menu browsing and ordering functions.
